KC Hall of Fame 2018

BIO – Terry George

Terry George graduated from Denton High School in 1966 and was a standout basketball player at Kilgore College from 1964-66 under head coach Joe Turner.

From 1964-66, Terry played guard for the Rangers, with records of 31-2 and 18-9. His freshman year, the Rangers were Texas Eastern Conference Champions and were 30-0 heading into the NJCAA National Tournament. Unfortunately, they lost to Dodge City, Kansas, to eliminate them from the third round.

His sophomore season, KC tied for second place in the TEC with a 7-3 conference record.

Terry graduated from KC with an Associate of Business in 1966, and then transferred to the University of Texas at Arlington where he also played basketball. He graduated from UT-Arlington in 1968 and served as a graduate assistant basketball coach at UTA from 1968-69.

In 1969, Terry was named head basketball coach at Sam Houston High School in Arlington (Texas) where he coached until 1972.

From 1972-74, he was assistant basketball coach at UTA. In 1973, he earned a Master’s of Education from North Texas State.

He then served as the head men’s basketball coach at Kilgore College from 1974-79.

From 1979 to 2003, he was manager of Oil Patch Pipe & Supply in Kilgore and served on the KISD School Board from 1992-2015.

He is now a managing partner at Geonix Oilfield Products in Kilgore and is an avid supporter and donor to KC Athletics.

Family owned and operated since 2003, Geonix is headquartered in Kilgore, Texas. After many years working in the oil & gas industry, Terry George, his two sons Bradley and Bryan, and a longtime family friend “Uncle Larry” Nixon joined forces and opened their first location in Kilgore.
Built on twelve acres, the 15,000 square-foot Kilgore store maintains an inventory in excess of 7,500 SKU's from more than 1,200 high-quality vendors. A second location opened its doors in Nixon, Texas in 2011 to serve the South Texas region and plans for additional stores are underway.

With their knowledge and experience spanning more than 100 years of serving the oil and gas industry – they are known to have what it takes when it comes to knowledge, parts & service.

Today we are pleased to induct Terry George into the KC Athletics Hall of Fame.
